

Abstract of the Disclosure

A heald frame including two posts, two cross members and connectors which are used for securing at least one post to at least one corresponding cross member. Each connector includes an intermediate tubular fixing element which is disposed in a housing provided in the cross member and indented with respect to a front face of the cross member and which element defines an internal volume in which a protrusion extending from the at least one post is seated.